Developer, designer, problem solver.

Surrounded by piles of crumpled notebook pages and a box of Sharpies, we were the coolest kids in 4th grade. Laying out the pages for our skate magazine; we didn't have a name, or even a ruler, but we knew we just wanted to make something fun. After all of that work, our magazine now proudly rests in a box beneath hundreds of other childhood projects in my moms basement. Those misguided attempts that fizzled out all too soon served to spark my passion for the process of bringing projects to life and my commitment to surpassing all expectations.

My dedication to each client, energy for every aspect of a project, and consistently high quality of work have given me amazing opportunities to work with agencies such as GMMB, Ogilvy, and Design Army, Fortune 500 companies including Stanley Black & Decker, Macy's, Boeing, Hearst, and T. Rowe Price, and non-profit organizations such as Brady Campaign, AARP, and Baltimore Center Stage.

UI/UX Developer

DDC Public Affairs

I am responsible for creating, developing, and maintaining client websites for national grassroots, advocacy, and PAC organizations. Focusing on user experience, I work closely with our creative and client teams to develop strategies and sites that increase interactivity and accomplish their goals.

Developer & UI Designer

Freelance

As a developer and UI designer, I worked with clients to develop their branding for improved user experience and increased conversions. I consulted with small organizations and start-ups as a trusted advisor for maintaining competitiveness in their marketplace and as a designer and developer to bring these strategies to life.

Production Coordinator & Studio Manager

Metromotion Productions & Daylight Studio

I coordinated all in-studio projects, organized teams to complete tasks, and developed new business proposals. Long-term projects included expanding our national client base, managing continuing client communications and expectations, producing and updating content for the website and social media channels.
